They had pre-mises eminently suitable for bonding purposes, Wong Angan was charged on the information but the Customs officials granted the privilege of the China Merchants Steam Navigation Company. This was a glaring injustice to warehouses belonging to other companies and firms. He did not think that Sir John Walsham comprehended that the effect of this monopoly would be serious. by detrimental to British shipping and mercantile interests. A German firm secured the lease of the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company's wirehouse, and immediately the German representative was alive to the fact that represantations on the bonding question should be made Garman Minister had partionlarly interested himsolf in that particular wharf; it might be a coin eidence that his interest commenced with the requisition of the wharf and warehouse by a German subject. Ino Chamber, he thought, ought to try and got the same privileges granted to British commerce and representations should he made to the Foreign Office on the subject.

Mr. Kaswick said that after the statement

dence circulated by the Chamber, the commitad warshonses in Shanghai had been under discussion a long time. It was thought to be most unjust the granting of the privilege to trousers, valued at 50 cents, her property, from the China Merchants' Steam Navigation Company to the exclusion of all others, as soon as Prisoner pleaded guilty, and was sout to good the wharf had, been leased to a German firm. Other firms offered considerably better facilities to the ocean trade-apart from the const or purely local trade-whereas that firm, until the privilege was granted, did but one part in minety-nine of the entire trade. When we are told this it could only be interpreted as George Cook, a seaman, was charged on axpressly fostering trade at the German wharf, plicit enough, and then ensued a departmental there is a company in Japan who have, and for the steamer Frisia, with stealing from that that a German treaty stipulating for it had steamer on the 25th inst., sundry stores, valued been pressed for and agreed to. He believed that a notice was nut in some of the Shanghai Prisoner plended not guilty, and made a long | papers, but the bona fides of all concerned could given. Trade would gradually go, it must go, The captain and a seaman named Petersen to them; the Nor identscher Lloyd had transferred their bats from their old borth to a new one, and others were doing likewise. Certainly it was a matter of time only when other bonded warehouses would of a necessity have to be established; but in the meantime the trade would be wholly monopolised by the China Merchants' Stram Navigation Company's warehouses, and permanent injury doug to other older established wharves. This injustice he considered, should have been taken up by the British Minister, who, in the first place, should have watched over muttors as did the representatives of other countries. The matter now required grave consideration. The Chairman suid his attention had been called to an expression he had used when referring to the German Minister: he hoped they would not think he had said anything two packets of tea, his property, from a wharf on, against that gentleman; he merely inferred that he had exhibited energy that they would have

In religion and ecclesisatical matters Thibet resembles very much Christendom during the Middle Ages, for not only do monasteries filled with monks abound, but bermits are found soattered all over the country, some of whom are reputed to be very hely men, of great spiritualpower. On the road from Thibet to China there is a lange calcareous hill, the rugged sides of which are lined to its summit with caves, or more correctly apertures, each one of which is the dwelling place of a human being. The hill is also covered with Bhuddie sentences cut in large characters. In one of these caves there dwelt a | SHA holy Lama of great repute, who had completely withdrawn from the world, some score of years before, and taken up his abode here, since which time he had never once left his retreat. Of what profit therefore worldly goods be to such a man? It is but natural that in a country where holiness of life means much prayer and contomplation, the habits of such a man should have been an attraction, calling many disciples around him, all of whom yied with each other in emulating his example and living a life of abstraction: a life above the wants of the body; a life that their abode here. When such is the case, to keep th roads open for travellers the Thibetans emplo a novel expedient. The women of the distric at variance with the neighbouring one, take the place of the male guides drivers, and other atter dants of a caravan, and conduct it safely through the hostile locality, for no man would dream o attacking women or plundering the proper entrusted to their care, unless he wished to despised and branded for the remainder of his life The mode of journeying in Thibet is either camels or horses, or post, when each distric furnishes the cattle and attendants required travellers from post to post. When within the influence of Lhassa, the outaks of pest cattle ar readily furnished, and if a Chinese official is tra velling he rarely pays for them, but as the trave ler proceeds further and further away from th centre of authority there is some difficulty exper enced in procuring the outahs, and even Chines officials have to pay extortionate sums for con- On New YORK. veyance. Travelling with one's own cattle can only be accomplished when the caravan is large and protected by a military escort. In large caravans the daily journey is short and the cattle are not overworked. The Chinese itinerary thus describes a tough bit of read. "At Angti, you cross a snow clad mountain; the road is very steep; the accomulated snows resemble a silvery vapour. The fog which the mountain exhales penetrates the body and makes the Chinese ill." The mountain of Angti is exceedingly lofty and steep, so that travellers have to start at dawn of day to ascend it, but the sun will have already set before they roll down the opposite side. The ascent and descent of this mountain is truly frightful; every step is buried in the snow, and terrific precipices, and chasme yawn at short distances. Nothing but the longhaired exencould safely carry guides or travellers over it. Some half century ago, there existed a Chief of Angti who was a most remarkable man. He was only three feet in height but with a good broad chest and arms that denoted great physical power; his face though broad like the people of his race, showed energy of expression and regularity of feature; the upper shortness of hisstature being due to his very short legs, in fact he really appeared to have no legs at from being active in his movements, for his feet were also perfect. He was a redoubtable warrior and always wore a sword at least twice his own part of the man's body was perfect physically, the all. This defect, however, did not prevent him length, stuck into his girdle. POST-OFFICE AOTICES.

When Correspondence has been mis-sent or delayed (both of which are liable to happen occasionally) all that the addressee need do is to note on the cover, Sent to ----, or Received at 7 p.m., or as the case may be, and forward it, without any other writing whatever, to the Postmaster-General. This should be acted on the first time cause of complaint occurs; it is a mistake to let such matters pass for fear of giving trouble, a course which generally gives more trouble in the end.

LOCAL DELIVERY-No delivery is attempted on board Ship, at the Peak, Kowloon, Aberdeen &c., nor at any private house (even though named in the address) when there is a place of business nearer, at which delivery can be effected. The Postal Guide for 1887, revised to date will be found in the Daily Press Directory. p. 385 large edition, p. 701 small edition. This Postal information published in Hengkong. The authorised List of Mails lisened in connection with this paper is the one published twice each day in our Extra, which is always corrected to a much later hour than that given
